BRIAN
POLES

The duo who are Plastik Funk have been around for what now seems like forever and have continuously pumped out solid music, most notably, their collab with

@ThePl Tujamo "Who" which Reno, NV. debuted four years ago.
@thepe Today the duo which bpole5 consists of Rafael Ximenez-Carrillo and Mikio Gruschinske released their new original "Tight" via Flamingo Recordings and which is a collaboration with Strobe & Lazn and featuring Sapele. "Tight" has been featured in sets from the likes of Martin Garrix, Nicky Romero, Don
Diablo, and more and it destroys the dance floor.
 We here at TSS also got a chance to talk to the German duo to talk about the song, how their sound has progressed through the years, and some other fun things.
 So check out the interview below and make sure to support the song!

TSS: "Who" with Tujamo was the first song I heard by you guys. How would you say your music has evolved since then?

Plastik Funk: "Who" was probably a door opener and put us in the attention of many people. But already long before this tune and of course many releases after, we are releasing all kind of house music. After "Who" the scene and gigs became more and more big-room or "festivalish," so also our sound changed a bit. But we always stuck to our love to house. Now we are more than happy that the sound of today goes back to house and groove. Not just "Drops" and loudness.

TSS: Tell us about your new song "Tight."

Plastik Funk: "Tight" was born from an idea of working together with our friends Strobe and Lazn from Munich. We met so many times and always talked about doing something together. After ADE last year in Amsterdam, several beers and some long nights out, we made plans and talked about ideas to work on. We were sending initial ideas back and forth until the result was good for both parties. Sapele from Sweden then performed the vocal on this and here we go.

TSS: You worked with Strobe, Lazn, and Sapele on "Tight." What was it like to collaborate with
