FIND OUT MORE ABOUT PLASTIK FUNK'S FUTURE PLANS AND UPCOMING RELEASES IN OUR EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW!

01 MARCH, 2016 INTERVIEWS NEWS 193

Rafael Ximenez-Carrilo and Mikio Gruschinske did not always intend to create electronic music; the two began DJing hip hop music while in high school together, but branched into house music after being transformed by the beats of legends like Frankie Knuckles and David Morales. After a series of club hits, Plastik Funk joined the international tour scene and then produced "Who", which put them in the UK spotlight and peaked at 21 on the UK Singles Chart.

Plastik Funk have since fine-tuned their signature sound, which blurs the lines between progressive and tech house to create a captivating and energetic vibe that is suitable for both relaxing and hitting the town. Recently, they released a brand new track, entitled "Tight", that has garnered support from the likes of Martin Garrix, Nicky Romero, Don Diablo and more. We've had the opportunity to catch up with the guys, so below you can check out our exclusive interview!

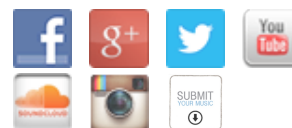

1) Hello, guys. Where does EDM Nations find you today?

2) So, tell me. How did you come up with such a fantastic name?

Actually... we do not really remember... it is already 14 years ago. But it was something like: This sounds good. Let's take it! 😊

3) How is it working together? Do you always get along?

It's like a marriage. You need to have a healthy basis to work together, which also includes arguing and making up again. Important is to have respect for your (business)partner.

4) What can you tell us about your brand new single „Tight“?

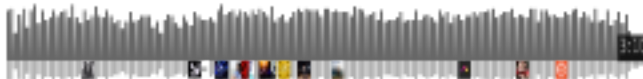

We were talking for some time to Strobe and Lazz to do something together and after some time, we found the right idea to work on. The singer „Sapele“ is a really talented guy from Sweden, whom we met early last year, when we were in Stockholm for some songwriting sessions. The result is a groovy house tune, which already got nice feedback and support from guys like Nicky Romero, Martin Garrix, Ummet Ozcan, Don Diablo, Gregor Salto, W&W, Blasterjazz, Yves V.....

support it has already received?

It feels great! Nowadays it is really hard to stick out of the masses of releases coming out everyday. And getting that kind of attention is just the right teasing for the hard work we are investing. Also tells us, we are doing something right 😊

6) What do you think has been the „biggest break“ so far?

Well. The most attention we got was for the track we did with Tujamo: „WHO“. It's still following us, but also the „Everybody Dance Now“ gave us a huge push. We guess, you just have to work constantly on a high level to be successful on a long term. And of course, never forget where you come from!!

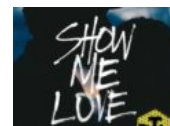

7) At the beginning of your careers, what was the hardest thing you've had to go through?

We both were working full-time in „normal“ jobs and handling those with the wish to tour every weekend and actually do that got us in some tricky situations from time to time. But with the step of doing the music thing as our main profession made things a lot easier, although it was also quite a risk... but after 14 years, we are still here.

8) What are some of your influences that helped define your style?

We are pretty open minded musically, so hearing different DJs play different styles of music inspired us a lot, especially while touring. But of course there are some role models like Axwell (back in the days) or Junior Jack and Kid Creme. We just love all kinds of groovy sound

9) What have you seen change the most in the electronic dance music world since you've started?

Everybody now wants to be a DJ. It's really easy to mix two tracks together now with all those laptops and sync things. You don't need to train beat matching two (or more) records over years anymore. This made the craft of DJing quite inflationary. Also producing tracks became a lot easier and cheaper. You don't need to invest thousands of euros to build your studio anymore... but this also lead to a wider variety of sounds and styles. So there is always a good and a bad side of the story.

10) Where are we going to see you next? What are your future plans?

We are actually just packing our stuff for a Mexico and USA weekend. Than a lot around Europe and in March again in Miami for the Wintermusic Conference. The airlines love us!

11) Do you have any last thoughts for our readers?

We would like to thank all our supporters for the last years and sticking with us all the time. Please keep on playing our tracks and we hope to see you at a club or festival somewhere very soon!!!

KYGO IS ALREADY CONQUERING
CHARTS WITH HIS NEW ALBUM

"CLOUD NINE"! May 27, 2016

On May 13th, Kygo unveiled his highly anticipated album "Cloud Nine". Well, it looks like this new production has already started to conquer charts, seeing as Billboard has just announced that it has scored the number one spot in the "Dance/Electronic Albums" section. Just one week after its release, "Cloud Nine" sold 17,000 copies, being
